about three historic gatherings that have shaped Western life more than any other forces. I have tried to picture to myself

(I)-The gathering of the disciples at the last supper, (2)-Luther and his few friends going to the Diet of Worms,

(3)-The landing of the Pil-grim Fathers.

Have you thought that all the characters put together would not fill even a decent sized room?

Big crowds are not neces sary to do big things.

Don't be afraid of joining in a seemingly small movement.

and girls as could be found anywhere in the country; finer, in a good many ways, than in many other schools in the country, as well as the first high school in the state to introduce the self-government plan among the students. This plan in the last three years has almost revolutionized the disciplinary methods of the school and has been a wonderful success in every way. The girls and the boys discipline themselves through their separate students' councils. Now the girls' council has voluntarily taken upon fiself to introduce something that has been agitated here for a number of years—a uniform dress for girl students at the high school. This matter has been much discussed and talked about for ages. The girls have selected for their uniform a blue serge skirt and white middle blouse with the square-ended black tle. It is a fine thing for the students to have started this movement on their own initiative. It should aid in the democratic atmosphere of the school, for financially it will prove inexpensive, economical and sorviceable, bringing it within the reach of all the students.

There is no more imporant work for a community than to see that all places where food products are being manufactured, handled or distributed are in a sanitary conditor. Yet, as important as this work is, it is not receiving in El Paso the attention it should from the housewives of the city. The civic committee of the Woman's club has concernated with the city sanitary insectors, going with them on their rounds of inspection, and much good has been accomplished in this way, but there is always room and need for more good and more women ought to so with the women who are the patrons of the products of the dairies, bakeries and markets, have much quicker and more apparent results in persuading the proprietors to clean up, than when the inspectors are published monthly in the city health department bulletin, which may be obtained at the city hall on application.
